Student lawyers given unique opportunity to launch career

My Home Move expands graduate recruitment programme

Successful provider of conveyancing services My Home Move has identified an innovative way to expand its graduate recruitment programme following the purchase of HECCC (Higher Education Campus Call Centres) near its head offices in Leicester.

The call centre, based near the DeMontfort University and staffed by law students, was originally set up in 2002 to offer an overspill service for companies requiring additional telephone resources. My Home Move is now taking the centre on as part of its existing operation giving law students the opportunity to earn money, gain knowledge and experience and, if they wish, work towards a place as one of the company's own members of staff.

As an added benefit, My Home Move has setup a new student saving scheme called USP (University Saving Plan) where the company is depositing an additional sum of money into a savings account for each student for every hour worked. This means that once they have graduated they will have funds waiting to help them on their way. The savings can also be accessed up to twice in any one year while they are still studying.

There are currently over 35 under-graduates manning the call centre, who are mainly in their first or second year of studying. My Home Move hopes to increase this number to between 50 and 60 ultimately.

Kevin Smith, operations director at My Home Move, comments: “Supporting young people coming into the profession is very important. We are always looking for good quality graduates and have been investigating the most effective way to link up with the University for some time now. In the past HECCC has provided a source of income for law students who needed extra money while they studied. Now it will give them the direct opportunity to potentially launch their career as well.”
