MY HOME MOVE GOES CARBON NEUTRAL

Provider takes steps towards 'green conveyancing'

Successful provider of conveyancing services My Home Move is delighted to announce that it is now officially carbon neutral. Having achieved this milestone, the company has ambitious plans to take its environmental policy even further as it seeks to find a formula for 'green conveyancing'.

My Home Move has been working with various organisations over the last few months to both reduce and neutralise its carbon foot print. The company has been seeking ways to develop its environmental policy in conjunction with government funded agency Envirowise.

Meanwhile, with the help of The CarbonNeutral Company, My Home Move has offset its carbon output by investing in two energy projects in India. The first supports the construction and operation of new wind farm turbines at various sites in the states of Rajasthan, Gujarat and Karnataka. The second is an energy capturing project in Kotmar where waste heat from a local steel plant is being converted into electricity and channelled into the local grid.

Stephen Hayter, sales and marketing director at My Home Move, comments: "This is something we have been working hard on and we are delighted to be able to announce our neutral status. It does not stop here, though. We're in the process of refining our company environmental policy and hope that our move into more environmentally friendly premises this year will help further."

My Home Move was already a good few steps ahead in its quest to find an environmentally friendly way of conducting its business even before it began tackling its carbon foot print. By its nature conveyancing is very paper heavy and can be quite wasteful. My Home Move's extensive use of I.T. makes it naturally less paper hungry than many other conveyancing providers.

Stephen continues: "We are the conveyancing sector's leading innovator and this has helped us to reduce paper wastage over the years. Becoming carbon neutral marks another important step towards our ultimate goal of achieving 'green conveyancing'. We hope we will be able to make real progress in discovering a workable formula for 'green conveyancing' – an efficient and environmentally friendly way to manage property transactions befitting the 21st century."
